MEDITERRANEAN STUDIES

Academic year 2017 / 2018

School of European and International Studies

Academic Year 2017-2018

Arab Spring and Europeanization, Climate Change and migration – the Mediterranean region with more than 500 million inhabitants is confronted with unprecedented challenges. In our bilingual programme (English/French) we try to address the next generation of Euro-Mediterranean decision-makers and to offer an unique education at the crossroads of theory and practice.

The program aims at preparing students for professional life in a challenging context. The academic curriculum has been designed in order to enable students to develop an overarching, encompassing understanding of the political, social, economic, and cultural challenges of today's world, especially the Mediterranean region.

Following the leitmotif "Learning and living the Mediterranean", the students rotated each trimester, moving their place of studies from Nice to Tunis and then to Rome. During the stay in Tunis, a special emphasis has been given to the transformation of the Arab world, especially the Maghreb. A study trip to Istanbul, allowed the students to discuss the historical challenges of EU-Turkey-relations with university professors, international civil society representatives and Turkish refugees organisations.

Thanks to our partners in Tunis, Rome and Istanbul and thanks to the institutional support of the European Commission, our curriculum has been organized in the following locations:

- from October 5th, 2017 until January 12th, 2018 in Nice, at the Institut Européen · European Institute, CIFE;
- from January 12th until April 10th, 2018 in Tunis, in cooperation with the Université Internationale de Tunis (UIT) and the Institut de recherché sur le Maghreb contemporain (IRMC);
- from April 10th until July 5th, 2018 in Rome, in cooperation with Istituto Affari Internazionali (IAI) and LUISS University;
- from April 21^s^t until April 30th, 2018 in Istanbul - a workshop has been organized in cooperation with Istanbul Bilgi University.

ORGANISATION OF THE PROGRAMME

THE MODULES

The curriculum has been composed of five obligatory modules. University teachers, namely from French, Tunisian, Turkish, German, British and Italian universities, experts from International and European organisations as well as researchers from our partner institutes contributed to our programme.

Various teaching methods and course formats have been applied within each module.

1. Conflict Management and Peacemaking (76 hours)

 Mr Tobias BÜTOW, Director of Euro-Mediterranean studies at CIFE, Nice.

The Mediterranean is a case study par excellence for Peace and Conflict Studies. Understanding and explaining questions of war and peace has been at the heart of „International Relations“ as an academic discipline – from its very beginning after the First World War. In the last two decades, Mediterranean societies have been significantly affected by inter-group violence and inter-state conflicts: from the Western Balkans to Cyprus, from Israel to Palestine, from Syria to Libya. Mediterranean conflicts are characterized by external interventions. The module will focus at causes and dynamics of escalation and de-escalation, including international law and peace-making in a multi-perspective approach. Theories of International Relations will help to analyze the case studies.

2. Sustainable Development and Globalisation (92 hours and 30 minutes)

✚ Mr Jean-Claude VÉREZ, Professor of Economy at Artois University and Mr Laurent BAECHLER, Chief Editor of "L'Europe en Formation", Director of the MAEIS – European Integration and Global Studies.

The 21st century faces unprecedented economic, environmental and social challenges. As economic development exercises increased pressure on limited resources, deteriorates the environment and creates growing inequalities, Mediterranean economies struggle to find their way through these challenges. An introduction into the fundamental logics behind the process of economic globalization will set the ground for a regional analysis of sustainable development, energy policies, climate action and demographic dynamics - in times of globalisation.

In order to explain long term growth and development processes, the course explored the role of key factors shaping the world economy. World trade was thus studied to understand its main driving forces, with a focus on international trade negotiations. Financial markets were explored to shed a light on their contribution both to long term development and major economic crisis.

Another goal of the module was to understand how globalisation refers to the problem of international economic governance, with its institutions, actors and processes.

The last part of the program introduced students to sustainable development issues, mainly climate change.

3. Regional Integration and Transformation (81 hours)

✚ Ms Silvia COLOMBO, Senior Fellow, Istituto Affari Internazionali, Rome.

The Mediterranean has experienced different ways of regional integration and transformation. The European Union and its member states have become a ‘model’ of regional integration. European nation states have agreed to transform their sovereignty into a multi-level governance system with the goal of ensuring regional peace, fostering welfare for their citizens and increasing their interdependent economic power. How is the dynamic architecture of the European institutions functioning – in times of both Europeanisation and Euroscepticism? And looking to the south: To what extent are the Arab League or the Gulf Cooperation Council comparable models of regional integration? What are the levels of cooperation between EU and other cases of regional integration in the Mediterranean region?

From a theoretical perspective, regional integration is primarily an elite-driven, government-sponsored transformation process. However, socio-economic and political changes could be triggered by social movements and civil society actors, as the 'Arab Spring' has shown trans-regionally in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region. At the domestic level, change and continuity differ significantly across countries. To what extent is the MENA region more integrated or more fragmented as a result of these changes? How can regional institutions be adapted to deal with them and their root causes?

This module offered insights into current dynamics in the Mediterranean from the standpoints of international relations (IR) literature, European studies and the field of area studies devoted to exploring this complex and multifaceted region. Its complexity has been reconstructed and assessed with a view to providing students with fresh, critical tools to analyse and deal with it.

International guest lecturers coming from universities, think tanks, European institutions, diplomacy and civil societies have been invited to present emerging patterns of international politics, European and area studies, including comparative (democratic) transitions, globalisation trends and European foreign policy towards the MENA region.

4. Mediterranean Politics and Societies (120 hours and 30 minutes)

✚ Mrs Esther ZANA-NAU, Programme manager at IMPALLA and Vice-President of CIFE & Mr Yvan GASTAUT, Lecturer at Université de Nice - Sophia Antipolis

Mediterranean societies are shaped by specific historical social, political and legal structures, by interrelated discourses, institutions and actors. In the light of an unprecedented information revolution, interdependencies are growing. The module focused upon the similarities and differences in Mediterranean societies, starting with a historiographical introduction, in order to approach several policy fields and social phenomena: migration, gender, religion, media and youth.

Both the current refugee crisis and the representation of youth in the Mediterranean are unprecedented. The Mediterranean and the European Union are challenged by a historical refugee crisis. At the crossroads of theory and practice, this module identified challenges the Mediterranean societies are confronted with.

5. Project Management and Intercultural Communication (89 hours and 30 minutes)

✚ Under the direction of Mr Mehmet Emre GÜR, CIFE Representative in Turkey, Alumni Relations Manager and Mr Tobias FLESSENKEMPER, PDG of elbarlement

In an ever more globalised world, the government and private sector are asked to provide more services with less. Moreover, the movement of peoples across borders has created challenges for an increasingly multicultural world. By default, there is more competition over resources, goals and interests at local, state and regional levels. In order to be credible, governments, businesses organisations and individuals must be able to deal with new challenges professionally and efficiently and to maximise the potential of any given situation. If we want to impact policies and participate in the development of those policies, we also have to open ourselves to processes of consensus building, conflict management and negotiations.

In this module we try to develop an understanding of cooperation in political processes and various approaches in support of dialogue, negotiation, and conflict management. In workshops students will focus on Project Cycle Management and Intercultural Communication. In individual coachings we try to prepare our students at the crossroads of theory and practise for a professional life in challenging times.
