

ACADEMIC YEAR 2018/2019

Master in Advanced European and International Studies

Mediterranean Studies

SUMMARY

ACADEMIC YEAR

Arab Spring and Europeanisation, Climate Change and migration – the Mediterranean region with a population of more than 500 million people, is faced with unprecedented challenges. In our bilingual programme (English-French) we seek to address the next generation of Euro-Mediterranean decision-makers and offer unique educational experiences at the crossroads of theory and practice.

The programme aims at preparing students for professional life in a challenging context. The academic curriculum has been designed in order to enable students to develop an overarching and all-encompassing understanding of the political, social, economic, and cultural challenges of today's world, especially in the Mediterranean region.

Following the leitmotif “Learning and living the Mediterranean”, the students rotated each term, moving their place of study from Nice to Tunis and then to Rome. During their stay in Tunis, special emphasis was placed on the transformation of the Arab world, especially the Maghreb. On the other hand, in Istanbul, the focus there was directed towards Turkey and its neighbouring countries and partners, as well as climate change issues.

Thanks to our partners in Tunis, Rome and Istanbul and thanks to the institutional support of the European Commission, our curriculum was organised in the following locations:

- from October 9th, 2018 until January 11th, 2019 in Nice, at the Institut Européen - European Institute, CIFE;
- from January 11th until April 7th, 2019 in Tunis, in cooperation with the Université Internationale de Tunis (UIT) and the Institut de recherché sur le Maghreb contemporain (IRMC);
- from April 7th until July 2nd, 2019 in Istanbul, in cooperation with Bilgi University;
- from March 10th until March 16th, 2019 in Rome - a study trip was organised in cooperation with with the Istituto Affari Internazionali (IAI).

ORGANISATION OF THE PROGRAMME

The Modules

The curriculum was composed of five compulsory modules. University teachers, namely from French, Tunisian, Turkish, German, British and Italian universities, as well as experts from International and European organisations and researchers from our partner institutes contributed to our programme.

Various teaching methods and course formats were applied within each module.

1 Conflict Management and Peacemaking (66 hours)

Mr Tobias BÜTOW, Director of International Relations at CIFE, Nice.

The Mediterranean is a case study par excellence for Peace and Conflict Studies. Understanding and explaining questions of war and peace has been at the heart of International Relations as an academic discipline - from its very beginning after the First World War. In the last two decades, Mediterranean societies have been significantly affected by inter-group violence and inter-state conflicts: from the Western Balkans to Cyprus, from Israel to Palestine, from Syria to Libya. Mediterranean conflicts are partly characterised by external interventions. This module, focussed on the causes and dynamics of both escalation and de-escalation, including international law and peace-making with a multi-perspective approach. Theories of International Relations also helped in analysing the various case studies used in class.

Sustainable Development and Globalisation (95 hours)

Mr Jean-Claude VÉREZ Director of the MAEIS - Mediterranean Studies and Professor of Economy at Artois University, France

The 21st century faces unprecedented economic, environmental and social challenges. As economic development exercises increase pressure on limited resources, deteriorate the environment and create growing inequalities, Mediterranean economies are struggling to find their way through these challenges. The introduction into the fundamental logic behind the process of economic globalisation set the ground for a regional analysis of sustainable development, energy policies, climate action and demographic dynamics – in times of globalisation.

In order to explain the long term growth and development process, the course explored the role of key factors shaping the world economy. World trade was thus studied to understand its main driving forces, with a focus on international trade negotiations. Financial markets were explored to shed light on their contribution both to long term development and major economic crises.

Another goal of the module was to understand how globalisation refers to the problem of international economic governance, with its institutions, actors and processes.

The last part of the program introduced students to sustainable development issues, mainly climate change.

Regional Integration and Transformation (108 hours)

Ms Silvia COLOMBO Senior Fellow, Istituto Affari Internazionali, Rome, Italy.

The European Union and its member states have become a 'model' of regional integration. European nation states have agreed to transform their sovereignty into a multi-level governance system with the goal of ensuring regional peace, fostering welfare for their citizens and increasing their interdependent economic power. How is the dynamic architecture of the European institutions functioning – including the European neighborhood policy? To what extent are the Arab League or the Union for the Mediterranean following a similar path of regional integration? How can we explain the transitions and differences in the Southern Mediterranean region since the Arab spring?

This module offered insights into current dynamics in the Mediterranean from the stand-points of international relations, literature, European studies and the field of area studies devoted to exploring this complex and multifaceted region. Its complexity has been reconstructed and assessed with a view to providing students with fresh, critical tools to analyse and deal with it.

International guest lecturers have been invited to present emerging patterns of international politics, European and area studies, including comparative (democratic) transitions, globalisation trends and European foreign policy towards the MENA region.

Mediterranean Politics and Societies (97 hours)

Mr Yvan GASTAUT Lecturer at Université de Nice - Sophia Antipolis

Mediterranean societies are shaped by specific social, political and legal structures, by interrelated discourses, institutions and actors. In the light of an unprecedented information revolution, interdependencies are growing. The module focused on the similarities and differences in Mediterranean societies, starting with a historiographical introduction, in order to approach several policy fields and social phenomena: migration, gender, religion, media and youth.

Both the current refugee crisis and the representation of youth in the Mediterranean are unprecedented. The Mediterranean and the European Union are challenged by an unprecedented refugee crisis. At the crossroads of theory and practice, this module identified challenges the Mediterranean societies are faced with.

Professional skills workshops

(65 hours)

Mr Mehmet Emre GÜR CIFE Representative in Turkey, Alumni Relations Manager

In an ever more globalised world, the government and private sector are asked to provide more services with less. Moreover, the movement of peoples across borders has created challenges for an increasingly multicultural world. By default, there is more competition over resources, goals and interests at local, state and regional levels. In order to be credible, governments, businesses organisations and individuals must be able to deal with new challenges professionally and efficiently and to maximise the potential of any given situation. If we want to have an impact on and participate in the development of certain policies, we also need to open ourselves to consensus building, conflict management and negotiations.

In this module, professors sought to develop an understanding of cooperation in political processes and various approaches in support of dialogue, negotiation, and conflict management. During the workshops students acquired skills in Project Cycle Management, Intercultural Communication, Negotiation, Public speaking and the tracking and analysis of EU law proposals. In individual coachings we try to prepare our students at the crossroads of theory and practise for a professional life in challenging times.
