About the Programme

The European Integration and Global Studies programme of the Master in Advanced European and International Studies is targeted at students who have completed their undergraduate studies. It follows a distinctive approach: faithful to CIFE's motto "Learning and living Europe", participants rotate each trimester during this one-year-programme, moving their place of studies from Berlin to Nice and then to Rome or Istanbul, depending on their choice.

The programme is not only itinerant, but international and interdisciplinary as well, allowing students from all over the world to gain a deep understanding of the role of the European Union in an ever more complex world. From the settlement of international conflicts to the negotiation of trade agreements, democracy promotion or sustainable development strategies, students discover how EU institutions, policies and actors shape our world by exploring case studies and discussing with field experts. At the end of the academic year, students have the option to do a professional internship.

Overview of the Academic Year

- TERM 1
October
to December
- Starting in Berlin, the term encompasses introductory classes and courses with EU and international organisation experts within the five modules of the programme.
- TERM 2
January
to March
- Continuing in Nice, teachings focus on Europe's policies to explain the importance of the EU's role on the international stage as well as current challenges the European integration project is facing. During this term, students take their mid-term exams. A one-week study trip takes them to European and international institutions in Brussels, Strasbourg and Luxembourg.
- TERM 3
April to July
- Depending on their choice, students will either study in Rome or Istanbul. In Rome, special focus is given to the Mediterranean region and Africa with particular emphasis on the issues of migration, poverty and food security. In Istanbul, students study the dynamics of EU-Turkey relations and focus on area studies of the Black Sea region, the Caucasus including ENP and Central Asia. The academic programme concludes with the defence of the thesis and oral exams.
- Internship option
- Students who have chosen the internship option will pursue the programme by doing a professional internship of 2.5 to 3 months.
- Master in Advanced European and International Studies

Teaching Modules

Conflict and Cooperation in the International System World politics in the 21st century are confronted with dynamic, multidimensional challenges. The module aims at enriching students' understanding of the similarities, differences and interactions of national foreign policies in a globalised world. It considers emerging patterns of international politics, including international law and international tribunals, globalisation and transatlantic relations, as well as conflict management.

European Integration and External Action This module aims at equipping the students – the next generation of European and international decision-makers – with an expert knowledge of the structures, institutions, law and policies of the EU, as well as of the historical development of European unification, with a special emphasis on the challenges of enlargement.

Federalism and Multi-Level Governance This module provides an original perspective on contemporary political institutions, through varied federal and multi-level governance frameworks. It deals with issues such as diffusion and balance of power, sovereignty, minorities, democratic representation, conflict resolution and European integration.

Economic Globalisation and Sustainable Development The goal of this module is to study the key forces shaping economic globalisation and its challenges in their diverse dimensions. Without going into the details of economic theory, students explore the contribution of these fundamental driving forces to economic development as well as major economic crises. The module includes an overview of major sustainable development issues.

Carolina de Albuquerque Portugal, MAEIS 2018/19
Attaché (JPD), European External Action Service (EEAS)

CIFE gave me the opportunity to grow academically, professionally, as well as personally. The diversity of nationalities in class made it possible for me to make an incredible group of friends with different personalities, cultures and experiences. At the same time, the limited number of students per class gave me the chance to have deep interactions and exchanges with my colleagues, professors and staff, for which I am extraordinarily thankful.

Lowie Vueghs Belgium, MAEIS 2020/21
EU-Account Consultant, EY Ernst & Young

The nice thing about this Master was the great diversity of lecturers – academics and professionals – coming from various Universities and different backgrounds. To have practitioners sharing their insights with you is a major advantage of the programme, because it prepares you in a very concrete way for the time after your studies and equips you with the professional skills required on the European and international job market.

Isabel Dimitrov Bulgaria/Canada, MAEIS 2014/15
Senior Manager, Corporate Responsibility – Europe, Middle East, Africa, Cargill

I recall what attracted me to the programme in the first place: learning and living in three dynamic cities, the interdisciplinary nature of the modules and the small but diverse class size. The experience was all of this and more – it was truly transformative. My classroom was not only what I learned from my professors, it was what I learned everyday in class and outside of class with my classmates, as we discovered our cities, uncovered each other's perspectives and challenged our world views in ways we never thought possible. I thank CIFE for creating such a unique environment for its students to thrive in ways which go beyond the conventional route of learning – it is after all by doing things in a not so ordinary way that we can achieve the extraordinary.

For more than 60 years the Centre international de formation européenne has been promoting the values of Europe, European integration and governance, multilingualism and student mobility through its European and international higher education programmes. As CIFE President I am pleased to be able to contribute to the next stage in the development of this academic institution.
